

The offer:

At Birmingham City University's School of Education and Social Work we have a long-standing, close relationship with 100s of local schools, colleges and other educational and training settings, which means we understand the challenges facing educational professionals and leaders. This well-established and successful MTL/MEL programme is a blended Professional Development/Masters programme that offers a very competitive fee to employees of participating schools and colleges. This flexible programme offers an opportunity to enhance and enrich your own learning at the same time as extending your professional development, whatever your role and responsibilities.

- MTL/MEL offers schools and colleges a long-term sustainable approach to becoming a self-improving organisation through high quality partnership learning that is centred on real pedagogical practice within your own settings.
- MTL/MEL provides an opportunity to join a community of practice wider than your own institution. Our innovative use of online resources gives our MTL/MEL students access to debates and conversations with colleagues across the West Midlands that create important space for reflection on the ways educational and training organisations operate and can improve.
- MTL/MEL opens up a well-thought through, supportive 'third space' for deliberation and reflexivity for a whole range of educational professionals.

The fees:

For the MTL/MEL programme the individual module price is £450 per 20 credit module (the normal cost of the same module when delivered as part of a taught MA programme is £656).
