

Inspired by the song “Yellow” by Coldplay

I take in the melody as I did in the past,
You left with no words but notes that in my heart will last.
“Look at the stars... Look how they shine for you” the artist sings,
Although our road was split in twain, the echo of our song still remains.

I recall the first time your presence so gentle, playing your favorite song that immediately became my anthem.
“You know I love you so” the chorus rang,
and in that moment my soul and heart sang.
What was once yours, was also now mine,
Your name and song became entwined.

Now every harmony, a hollow pain,
Your name lingers in the wind, a whisper I cannot attain.
If I could rewind, I'd slow the time,
Take a step back to that perfect “Yellow” time.
Undo the silence, rewrite the lines,
unmake goodbyes, and be by your side.

As time moves on, it won't wait,
It doesn't bend, nor does it break.
All I have left is a song we loved,
Chords that play, but no longer for us.

Still, the song will ring in my ear,
Even in silence, our song is what I'll hear.
I remain with the tune, a piece of you,
A memory carved where love once grew.