“Score: The Podcast” Launches Tuesday, April 3, Featuring Major Film & Television Composers

LOS ANGELES — The team behind the hit film Score: A Film Music Documentary is launching a weekly show called Score: The Podcast featuring Hollywood’s top musical talent. (Subscribe now on iTunes, Stitcher and Spotify.)

Score topped the iTunes and Amazon documentary charts, spending five weeks in 2017 at #1. It is considered the definitive documentary about film composers.

Score: The Podcast seeks to expand on the subject with interviews and creative discussion with the artists behind the music of film, television and video games.

With unrivaled access and the unique spin of being recorded inside the composers’ own studios, Score: The Podcast will feature live conversation, music and an interactive game show dubbed “Name That Score,” in which listeners can play along to win soundtracks and autographed prizes.

Score: The Podcast is hosted by Robert Kraft, film music veteran and former President of Fox Music, and Kenny Holmes, a national award-winning journalist — both producers of the acclaimed documentary.

The first three episodes will be available April 3, with new episodes released each week, though fans can subscribe to the series now on iTunes, Stitcher and Spotify.

The first guests will be composer John Debney (Passion of the Christ, Elf, The Jungle Book, Liar Liar, The Greatest Showman), Harry Gregson-Williams (Shrek, The Martian, Chronicles of Narnia, The Town, Kingdom of Heaven, Man On Fire) and James Newton Howard (The Dark Knight, King Kong, Signs, The Fugitive, The Hunger Games). Episodes with composers Ramin Djawadi (Game of Thrones, Westworld, Iron Man, Pacific Rim) and Brian Tyler (Fast & Furious series, Marvel films, Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles) will round out the first five episodes.

“The Score world is so much bigger than what one 93-minute film captures,” said Kraft, an Oscar- and Grammy-nominated composer who ran Fox Music for two decades. “Scores are the absolute cutting edge of musical storytelling in today’s society, and people are taking note.”

Score: A Film Music Documentary was one of the top documentaries of 2017, according to iTunes and Amazon, and was released theatrically in a dozen major regions around the world.

“Film composers are the Mozarts and Beethovens of our generation,” said Holmes, who was co-director of photography and editor of the 2017 documentary.
