

TAKE A FREE COLLEGE COURSE!

Inside Out Prison Exchange: Crime & Justice
Wednesday, 1:30-3:30 pm
Date: September 2nd to December 9th

Hi! My name is Kevin Revier, and I am a criminal justice professor at Arcadia University.

During the fall semester, I will be running a course called Crime & Justice. When thinking about crime and justice, a number of social issues may come to mind: policing, inequality, institutional racism, healthcare in prisons, the war on drugs, and social movement and protest. Really, many of these issues have increasingly come to light today in 2020 – with the killing of George Floyd and Breonna Taylor, the ongoing spread of covid-19, a continuing overdose crisis, and a tremendous amount of movement for social change (from electoral politics to marching on the streets). In this course, we will discuss these pressing social issues and how they relate to criminal justice, equality/inequality, and social change.

We follow the Inside-Out model (<https://www.insideoutcenter.org/>). Inside-Out is an international program that brings together college students and incarcerated and formerly incarcerated persons to learn together. It is a chance for all participants to gain a deeper understanding of the criminal justice system through reflection, discussion, and group projects. Many students and instructors alike have viewed the course as a life-changing experience. The class will meet Wednesdays (1:30-3:30 pm) and, for health purposes, discussion will be conducted virtually on Zoom.

Upon completion, students will receive an Inside-Out certificate (great for a resume!). Students also have access to Arcadia University resources, including the Career Center. As an instructor, I provide support for students in advising, writing, and whatever else! **Currently, we are working on ensuring that incarcerated and formerly incarcerated students receive college credits and will have that information soon.**

Please let me know if you have any questions or are interested in signing up!
