

Forever Girl

That first look's the hook, you'll know it's right if she blinds out the light, nothing there but her everywhere, that can't be better kinda beautiful,

But there has to be smart behind the smile, mind and face assuring you're in the right place, a lover girl so much more than a cover girl, she's that kiss and sting impossible everything,

Next is the chase, romance burned at a slow pace, there's reason the last courtship lasts seasons, the toil draws out the one sweet that doesn't spoil, time paid for that loyal love that won't fade,

Bit by bit comes the commit, without knowing how, promises turn to vows, soon pledged words that change worlds, a ring display to confirm the magic you saw the first day,

Then maybe, maybe there's a mother in there to share, her chance to show her finest glow, watch her become one with little ones, while they get the best view to be forever girls too,

Through years and memories made, love changes shade, ready the spats and growth, bound hearts know both, but when fires burn her lover, she provides her cover, if there's strong to be, she ensures that strength in me,

Come whatever end, she's your rock and truest friend, days sharing warmth, her caress over any largess, and when good years grace wrinkles on that face, even through creases that look, and still you're hooked,

If she asks early on how long before the magic's gone, tell her never, because she only gets better, that driver of your crazy, your everyday amazing, leave her no doubt, not ever, tell her you're the one forever, girl.

-JC

