RightIndem appoints Amanda Blanc as Chair of Board of Directors

RightIndem today announces that Amanda Blanc has joined its board as non-executive Chair.

Amanda has been brought on board to help the digital claims provider deliver on its ambition to fundamentally change the way customers experience insurance at the point of claim.

Following a 30-year senior insurance career at a UK and European level, Amanda said the main attraction of working with the innovative tech firm was the potential to finally crack the perennial problem of disjointed claims service experiences.

She said: "I have had the privilege of meeting many great insurtechs and startups as I pulled together my portfolio over the last few months. In RightIndem I found a really special team with an elegant software solution that can be easily adopted by insurance claims providers. Bringing new thinking into the industry is something I have been advocating for some time and I look forward to helping RightIndem in their efforts to do just that."

Commenting on Amanda's appointment, Oliver McGuinness, CEO, said: "We are delighted to have Amanda on board and are really pleased that she believes in our vision. Her credentials and experience are second to none and I am confident she will help us become the digital claims solution of choice for the industry."

With this appointment, Rob Wirszytz, who has served as Chair of RightIndem since the company was formed, moves to become Vice Chairman on the board with responsibility for investor relations.
